Sicilian judge Paolo Borsellino noted everything he found out about the entanglements between the mafia and politics in his red diary. But ever since he was assassinated in 1992, the diary has been lost without a trace.

This is the inspiration for Liaty Pisani's latest spy novel. Agent Ogden sets out to track down the red diary. His search leads him into the icy spheres of the strategists who hold great power in Italy – the faces who are well known to the public, but never called to account. A tense spy thriller about the unscrupulous battle for power and privileges.
