Praise for Lukas Hartmann's Dark Bliss:

»Lukas Hartmann develops great poetic power,
full of sensibility and eloquent silence.«

Neue Zürcher Zeitung

Praise for Lukas Hartmann's To the End of the Sea:

»Hartmann presents the uncanny inevitability that seems to lie in the destiny of his figures with the unspectacular virtuosity of a true master of narrative.«

Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung

»Lukas Hartmann uses historical facts like an old, blemished mirror, in which we see not scenes from the past, but just ourselves looking in.

Trying to find out how we became what we are today.«

Lukas Hartmann

A Robber's Life

Of all the robbers who cast fear and terror at the end of the 18th century, Hannikel was one of the most feared. Just the sound of his name was enough to make any child in the Black Forest or Elsass tremble. And Hannikel is on the run, with his most loyal men, along with their women and children. Where can he find a safe place for them?

Jacob Schäffer, the head magistrate of Sulz, is obsessed with one mission: to put a stop to robbers, crooks and gypsies. After an honour killing, he finally tracks Hannikel down to a sighting in Chur, in Graubünden.

Wilhelm Grau, Schäffer's clerk, has been in on the hunt for the Hannikel band from the start. But he is finding it increasingly difficult to see these people as monsters – especially Dieterle, Hannikel's eleven-year old son.

A gripping and lively novel which leads the reader from gypsy camps in the depths of the Black Forest to the private quarters of Duke Karl Eugen and his wife Franziska.

Andrey Kurkov

The Gardener of Ochakov

The gardener, Igor's mother hired, is a mysterious man. He's about sixty years old, pretty sparing with his words, and won't drink a drop of alcohol. And what does the blurred, illegible tattoo on his upper arm mean?

With the help of a computer-savvy friend of his, young Igor manages to decipher it: Ochakov 1957, it reads, and Jefim Tschagin's House. The quest to get to the bottom of it takes Igor not only to Ochakov, a seaport on the Black Sea 500 kilometres away from his home near Kiev, but also to the year 1957...

In Andrey Kurkov's fantastical and absurd storytelling, anything is possible – even time travel to a past from which the present can perhaps be seen much more clearly.

Drawing Conclusions

Late one night, Brunetti is called away from dinner to investigate the death of a widow in her modest apartment. Though there are some signs of a struggle, the medical examiner rules that she died of a heart attack. It seems there is nothing for Brunetti to investigate. But he can not shake the feeling that something or someone may have triggered her heart attack, that perhaps the woman was threatened. Conversations with the woman's son, her upstairs neighbour, and the nun in charge of the old-age home where she volunteered, do little to satisfy Brunetti's nagging curiosity. With the help of Inspector Vianello and the ever-resourceful Signorina Elettra, perhaps Brunetti can get to the truth and find some measure of justice.

Insightful and emotionally powerful, Drawing Conclusions reaffirms Donna Leon's status as one of the masters of literary crime fiction.

Donna Leon, born in New Jersey in 1942, has lived in Venice since 1981. Commissario Brunetti made her books world-famous – you can follow in his footsteps through Venice, even cook and enjoy his favourite meals – but baroque music is just as important to her. Donna Leon lends her personal support to the recordings of her favourite orchestra »Il Complesso Barocco«. Together, they have released two gift books with CDs: Handel's Bestiary with Handel arias and Venetian Curiosities with Vivaldi music.

The Metamorphosis

- Freshly discover a world literature classic: Franz Kafka's The Metamorphosis, atmospherically illustrated by Tatjana Hauptmann.
- An ideal gift book.

»Prague, 25 October 1915: Dear Sir! You wrote recently to tell me that Ottomar Starke will be illustrating the cover of The Metamorphosis. I just had a little shock. It just occurred to me that he might want to draw the insect itself. Not that, please not that!«

Franz Kafka sent this pleading request to Kurt Wolff publishing house in 1915. Tatjana Hauptmann, who has illustrated a number of texts for Diogenes (most recently Theodor Storm's Little John) also kept to the author's wish: In her sensitive pencil drawings, Gregor Samsa's disturbing world comes profoundly to life right in front of our eyes.

Hansjörg Schneider

Night Book for Astrid

- A book of comfort for times of loss.
- Strikingly open and honest.

»When I wrote this book, I concentrated on authenticity rather than getting caught up with stylistic finesse. It is a diary of my grief. I could have chiseled a gravestone for Astrid. But as I am a writer, not a stonemason, this book is my gift for her instead.«

When Hansjörg Schneider's wife Astrid died of cancer in 1997, they had lived together for more than thirty years. »The truth is that we loved each other from the very beginning, and for a lifetime.«

After her death, Hansjörg Schneider kept a diary for one year. The result is a personal book about a great love and a moving document of grief.

»By the time you put this book down,
you will not be the same person
you were when you picked it up.«

Neue Zürcher Zeitung

»On the one hand, Night Book for Astrid
is the description of the existential crisis of the partner left behind. But the most interesting thing about it is that it speaks more of the happiness of love than the pain of death.«

Hippos under the House

- Sincere, rebellious and poetic.
- Hansjörg Schneider's last crime novel Hunkeler and the Eyes of Oedipus was number 1 on the Swiss best-seller list.

Hansjörg Schneider kept a new diary over the last ten years. He made notes on his reading, on encounters and projects, recording the moments of happiness that came by day, and the nightmares that haunted him by night. In the clear, direct language so treasured by readers of his Hunkeler novels, Hansjörg Schneider looks back at his life, his childhood, his marriage, his successes and failures as a writer – movingly and with laconic humour.

The diary of a writer who has preserved the ability to be amazed: about the road that he has travelled, about the beauty of nature and the shortcomings of humankind, about the new day, and about the night when he first dreamt of hippos.

The Signs of her Time

Marion Gräfin Dönhoff was a witness to the signs of her time: the alienation of East and West, the ever-increasing divide between rich and poor, the injustices of totalitarian regimes – and she set an example too: as a publicist and advisor to important contemporaries, she had a lasting impact on post-1945 German history. This book contains the personal memories and observations of a free spirit, commentaries on key figures of recent German history, as well as the exciting travelogues of a brave woman who experienced the conflict in the Middle East and apartheid in South Africa at first hand.

This book brings together the most important articles and reports published by Germany's most prominent journalist over a career spanning six decades. Vividly and intelligently written, they reveal her thoughts on the topics which concern us just as much today as they did back then: power and morality, the excesses of capitalism and the responsibility of the individual in society.

Adam's Legacy

Berlin, 2004. Edward Cohen, the owner of a hip fashion boutique, has heard again and again since he was a child how much he resembles his great-uncle Adam, who he never met. At the moment when Edward's life in Berlin breaks into a thousand pieces, Adam's legacy falls into his hands: a stack of papers, addressed to a certain Anna Guzłowski.

Berlin, 1938. Adam Cohen is a dreamer. But he is a Jewish boy in 1930s Germany, and this is no time for dreaming. When eighteen-year-old Adam meets Anna, he suddenly realises what all his dreams were about. But while the Cohen family are planning their escape to England, Anna disappears without a trace on the night of the 9th November 1938. How can Adam possibly find her?

With intrepid humour, Astrid Rosenfeld tells a moving story about fate and great emotions, and about how the past permeates the present.
